

Date: 5th March 2010

Half Page

THE STAR, Friday March 5, 2010

17

JUDGE: Caprice at the Dylan Hotel yesterday and (right) with designer Peter O'Brien and NCAD fashion mentor, Angela Woods

Get me an Irish hunk

CAPRICE IS LOOKING FOR A MAN HERE

By ANDREA McCULLAGH

SUPERMODEL Caprice is on the lookout for a hunky Irish man — as she has signed up for a new fashion reality show.

Caprice is working as a judge on the TV3 programme Style Wars and she is hoping that she might find a man after recently splitting from her boyfriend.

She said: "I was in a relationship for a year and I just broke up a month ago. It wasn't meant to be. Now I'm in Ireland so we could be on the search here. I may be lucky.

"I love of course tall, dark and handsome. It's somebody that you just relate to on so many different levels and you just get on."

Caprice launched the new series yesterday and she will be working in Ireland until July on the fashion programme. The team are looking for people who aspire to work in the fashion industry and every week the contestants will compete in challenges that result in an elimination.

Caprice said: "We are searching all over the country for people that have an affinity and a love for fashion. Anything to do with styling, designing or writing about fashion.

Talent

"You don't have to have any experience, just passion.

"I think we are going to find some really talented people. This is raw talent," she says.

Caprice will be joined on the judging panel by fashion designer Peter O'Brien and candidates will be mentored by Angela Woods of the National College of Art and Design.

The California babe runs her own fashion company which produces lingerie, swimwear, occasionwear and sleepwear.

The closing date for applications for Style Wars is March 12. See www.tv3.ie for details.